OVERVIEW

Robert Honeywell is a partner in the firm's Finance practice. He has more than three decades of experience in bankruptcy litigation and structured finance transactions. His litigation practice centers on New York and Delaware Chapter 11 and 15 bankruptcy cases—with a focus on defending against clawback suits and representing foreign (non-US) creditors in US bankruptcies—and has included appeals before the Southern District of New York and the Second Circuit Court of Appeals. His transactions practice includes providing deal structure advice and closing opinions to protect against potential bankruptcy challenges later (for example, for recharacterization, true sale and off-balance-sheet challenges, substantive consolidation, or fraudulent transfer). Areas of focus have included representing aircraft lessors and lenders in Chapter 11 cases filed by foreign air carriers in New York (including Avianca, Aeroméxico, and LATAM), and representing investment funds and brokerage customers in recovering their assets in broker-dealer bankruptcies (including Lehman Brothers).

PROFESSIONAL BACKGROUND

Robert originally practiced for several years in Houston (his hometown) and has made New York City his home since 1997. Prior to joining the firm, he served as the chair of the restructuring and insolvency practice at an international law firm.

Recent successes include obtaining a judgment in New York federal court (Southern District) against an international bank for breach of its duty to honor a letter of credit, and successfully settling aircraft leasing claims in the LATAM bankruptcy and clawback claims in the Sears and Arcapita bankruptcies. Prior successes include the consensual Chapter 11 restructuring of an equipment finance company (as debtor's counsel), the first restructuring of Avianca airlines (as creditors' committee counsel), and the dismissal or consensual settlement of multiple Chapter 11 clawback suits in the Adelphia, Lehman Brothers, and Tribune bankruptcies.
